Sort the Icicles

On the coldest nights of the winter, icicles hang from every eave in Frostwood, and the village children sort them by length, one of each in every row and column.

160 of their grids are left, from the lodge eaves to the high meadows. Each one is a Futoshiki puzzle: fill the grid so no number repeats in any row or column, and every little sign between two squares points to the smaller one.

Every puzzle has exactly one solution, checked by computer, and every one can be solved by logic alone, with no guessing.
